The legislative, executive, and judicial appropriation act of August 23, 1912, consolidated the Bureau of Statistics and Manufactures into the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, and the statistical work since then has been carried on by that bureau through its Division of Statistics. Until a few years ago the monthly and quarterly statistical reports, as required by section 337 of the Revised Statutes, were compiled by the collectors of customs for each customs district on blanks provided for that purpose and transmitted directly to the Department of Commerce. In view of the increasing expense to the Treasury Department of compiling statistics at each customhouse, experiments were started in 1915 with mechanical tabulating machinery. A bureau of customs statistics was organized in the New York customhouse under the direct supervision of the Treasury Department, and copies...
